Dumplings
with
Royal Baking Powder

No dessert is more delicious, wholesome and appetizing than a well-made dumpling, filled with the fruit of the season. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the crust is always rendered light, flaky, tender and digestible. Dumplings made with it, baked or boiled, will be dainty and wholesome, and may be eaten steaming hot with perfect impunity.

Recipe:—One quart of flour; thoroughly mix with three teaspoons of Royal Baking Powder and a small quantity of salt; rub in a piece of butter or lard the size of an egg, and then add one large potato, grated in the flour; after the butter is well mixed, stir in milk and knead to the consistency of soft dough; break off pieces of dough large enough to close over four quarters of an apple for other fruit as desired without rolling, and lay in an earthen dish (or steamer) and steam until the fruit is tender. Bake if preferred.

In all receipts calling for cream of tartar and soda, substitute Royal Baking Powder. Less trouble, never fails, makes more appetizing and wholesome food and is more economical. Royal Baking Powder is especially made for use in the preparation of the finest and most delicate cookery.

LOOK AT YOUR HAND.

Its Characteristics Will Tell You Exactly What You Are.

The thumb is the index of the will. A large thumb denotes "profound and original thought," a strong will and little general sympathy; a small and weak thumb denotes "vividation and irresolution." Voltaire had an enormous thumb. The fingers are "the instruments of intellectual life." The palm is "the evidence of animal life." The "useful hand" has the fingers square and knobby with the thumb large. The large palm shows "capacity for detail."

M. Desmoulles' theory is "that the vital action of every organization tends to develop certain lines and marks upon the susceptible surface of the palm. It is said that a hand is necessary to show character and disposition of the mind."

Sir Charles Bell tells of a Russian beggar, born without hands, who haunted the high road to Moscow and committed many murders before he was discovered and executed. His manner was to throw his head against the stomach of the person who was in the act of giving him charity, and having stunned him, to seize him with his teeth and so drag him into the woods.

Smooth fingers show a sort of momentary inspiration, which takes the place of calculation, and a faculty which gives the power of judging at first sight. The knobby fingers are connected with reflection and order and aptitude for numbers. The thumb is the most important index of character. The old anatomists called it the little hand.

Memorists attach special value to its operation, and physiologists have remarked its connection with the vital forces. It has been said that no more infallible sign of the approach of death can be afforded than the effort to cover the thumb with the fingers.

If a woman's thumb be broad, it shows strength of character. If it is narrow, it betrays softness of disposition. If the points of the fingers are rather large of the knobby type—she is a sensible woman. If they are pointed and smooth, she is of the artistic-impulsive class. —Rehabiter's Sunday Herald.

A FEMALE SULLIVAN.

A Woman Entirely Destitute of the Instinct of Mother's Love.

A strong, muscular-looking matron was committed to our jail for the manslaughter of her infant. There was no doubt that she had compassed the death of the child, for which inquiry she had justly received a heavy sentence, but it seemed to have been done rather through complete neglect and carelessness than from any actual murderous intention. She was, however, absolutely indifferent to the fatal result. Unlike all the other female prisoners we have known, she appeared to be entirely destitute of that pure instinct of mother's love which usually burns as an unquenchable flame even in the most sin-darkened soul. Apparently she was rather resolved to know that by the disappearance of the poor infant she had a child the less to require attention from her; but in fact she had no room in her thoughts for the matter at all.

The one absorbing topic of interest in her mind was her intense detestation of her sister-in-law, who had been the principal witness against her at her trial. According to her own account, these two ladies, mutually abhorring one another, had been in the habit of having periodical combats in the open streets of the town where they dwelt. The prisoner insisted on describing with the greatest gusto how they had "been" to challenge each other to a stand-up fight, and then retired for a few minutes to their homes to put on suitable garments for the fray, returning to the place where a ring was formed round them by an expectant throng; they would then have, as she expressed it, a certain "number of rounds," and would only cease when there seemed a risk of one or the other being incapacitated from renewing the fierce battle another day. As may be supposed, the prisoner was summarily checked in these agreeable reminiscences, but there was no other subject which had the smallest interest for her. She evidently considered herself a champion fighter, and probably thought it fortunate that she possessed in her brother's wife a detested object on whom she could exercise her prowess. Metaphorically speaking, it was like trying to pierce the hide of a hippopotamus to attack the heart of a man.

Impressed on the hard nature of this woman. She was compelled, as a matter of discipline, to listen respectfully to the admonitions addressed to her; but it was perfectly plain that she did not trouble herself to take in the sense of a single word. Her thoughts were far away, picturing, no doubt, the delights of another pugilistic encounter with her near relation, to take place as soon as possible after her release from prison—and to that ineffable enjoyment she was in due time allowed to depart when her period of detention expired. The conviction left on the minds of those who had tried to benefit her was simply that in her they had one of the most striking instances of failure they had ever known in their experience. —Blackwood's Magazine.

Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

CHAS. M. MEACHAM, Editor.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1889.

HOPKINSVILLE, KENTUCKY.

A live and growing city of 5,000 inhabitants, situated in a county of 40,000. The Louisville and Nashville has two lines of railroad in the county. The largest tobacco growing county in the world. Wheat, corn, hay, coal, live stock and fruits produce for export in large quantities. The city has four banks with an aggregate capital of $1,000,000. A planing mill and wagon factory, three carriage factories, lime factory, tobacco manufactory, two foundries, three brick yards, broom factory, steam laundry, ice factory, two large flouring mills in the city and several in the county. Splendid driving par and fine opera house. Five turnpikes centering in Hopkinsville. Building and Loan Association, Commercial Club, a telephone exchange, numbered streets and houses and city lighted by gas. Macadamized streets and brick sidewalks all over the city. Eleven churches, two colleges, a high school and the finest system of public schools, white and colored, in the State. Western Kentucky Lunatic Asylum with a population of 600, two miles east of the city. A $100,000 court house with town clock in the dome. A fine fire department and a company of State Guards. Little River furnishes an adequate supply of water for all purposes. Real estate low and rents cheap. Fine opening for woolen mill, pork packing establishment, fruit canning, yard and many other enterprises. Climate mild and invigorating and exceedingly healthy.

The Mayfield Monitor boasts of 39 announcements of candidates and says there are more to follow.

Since Pete Jackson challenged Sullivan, the big bruiser is trying to make up his mind whether it is worse to fight a negro or be bluffed by one.

The ponderous avoidpools of Tom Reed dropped into the Speaker's chair this week and a severe earthquake shock was reported as far off as New Hampshire.

In the city election in Louisville Tuesday the Democrats made a clean sweep, electing every candidate on their ticket with one exception and that one was defeated by a scratch.

President Harrison's message is one of the longest on record. In dragging through its tedious columns, the weary reader finds nothing to fix his attention beyond the plea for high tariffs and more pensions.

We have but one more chance at Emmett Logan's feet and here goes. When the able editor of the Louisville Times resigned, a vacancy was created that will be hard to fill—especially that part of it under his table.

Speaker Reed is one of the heavy weights of Congress, weighing somewhere about 22 stone, as the English would say. McCarthy, of New York, is the smallest member of the House, being only about five feet tall and light in proportion.

One of the surprises in the organization of the House was the election of the blind prescher, Dr. Milburn, the Chaplain of the last House. Dr. Milburn is a Democrat and of course did not expect to be re-elected by a House with a Republican majority of eight. The Republican caucus agreed upon Dr. Ramsdell, but when the vote was taken Mr. Cheadle, of Indiana, and another member bolted and half a dozen refrained from voting and the "Blind Man Eloquent" will continue to do the praying for the House, unless the enormous task he has assumed should prove too much for him.

Mr. Wilgus Will Retire.

(Copyright-Jouralist.)
The announcement that Traveling Passenger Agent W. A. Wilgus, of the Chesapeake & Ohio, is to retire from that position at the beginning of the new year, will be received with no little surprise by the railroad fraternity here, since he had come to be regarded as one of the company's best men and a fixture in its employ. Such, however, is the case, and Mr. Wilgus is now preparing to step down December 31. His retirement is very much regretted by General Passenger Agent Harry W. Fuller, and was only the result of the Big Four-C. & O. consolidation and a consequent general reduction in expenses. Mr. Wilgus has been with the company less than a year, but in that time he made such a record that when a reduction in the force was first talked of, an effort was made to have him retained. As the new man, however, when it was finally decided that one at Louisville had to be retired, it fell to his lot.

Mr. Wilgus, before going with the Chesapeake & Ohio, was on the Kentucky at Hopkinsville, and was one of the best known young newspaper men in the state. He will return to his home at the end of the month, and, despite good offers from two general passenger agents in the east, who had heard of his retirement, he will probably resume his editorial work.

Mr. Wilgus left this week for a pleasure trip to Texas and Mexico, having been given a month to enjoy himself at the C. & O.'s expense, on account of the faithful work he has done for the company.

More about Bigamist Brown.

(Nicholasville Democrat.)

Vasco D. Brown, or Brown as he spells it, is well known by the citizens of this city. In the year of 1880 he was united in marriage to Miss Belle Blanton, a charming and accomplished young lady of Louisville, who was well and favorably known in Nicholasville, she having been a frequent visitor to Mrs. Elizabeth Price, deceased. When Brown married he had about $5,000, which she gave him. Every business he engaged in proved a failure until everything she possessed was squandered. She has faithfully clung to him, however, with a love of true devotion, and not one word can be said derogatory to her character as a lady. Mrs. Brown has been in delicate health for some time, and as soon as she was able she left Russellville and came to Lexington, Ky., and is now at the house of her father-in-law, Mr. Marion Brown, who is a carpenter in that city.

THE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

There have been some expressions of dissatisfaction with the present Democratic County committee and suggestions in the public prints that a new one be elected at the January primary. County Committees have heretofore been appointed by the State Central Committee and are reorganized generally when this committee is changed, the members being suggested by conventions held to appoint delegates to State conventions. These county committees are empowered to fill vacancies, increase their membership and in fact exercise full authority in promoting the party's interests, subject of course to the ratification of the State Committee. The present committee for this county was appointed when Col. J. Stoddard Johnston was Chairman of the State Committee, and originally consisted of nine members, four of them located in Hopkinsville. In order that the party interests might be better subserved by local representation, the membership of the Committee has been increased from time to time until it now numbers 22, each magisterial district having one and some of the larger ones two members. In recommending members, care has been taken to select prominent and influential workers in the out-of-town districts and changes have been suggested to the appointing power whenever a member failed to attend or became incapacitated from any cause.

The present State Committee has never ordered the county committee reorganized. This would have to be done to supersede the present committee, unless the State Committee should see proper to remove them for inefficiency. All county committees should of right be reorganized or reappointed at least once in four years, but in the absence of such action, the Christian County Committee has held over just as other county committees have. Of course the coming primary has no authority to elect a county committee, but the convention called for May 17 might do so if the State Committee should deem the expressed dissatisfaction of sufficient importance to call for the reorganization of the Committee on the eve of a campaign of great importance, otherwise the proper time to reorganize would be in 1891, when the general state election comes off. The position of committee men is a troublesome one and a thankless one and no doubt any member of the present committee would promptly resign should a respectable number of his constituents ask him to make way for the appointment of some other man. The Committee as at present constituted is as follows:

Hopkinsville City—Jno. L. Dulon, Chairman; Chas. M. Meacham, Secretary.

Hopkinsville District—E. W. Davis, E. M. Fiack.

Fruit Hill—S. H. Myers.

Union School House—P. J. Glass, J. C. Moore.

In the Union School House district Mr. Moore was appointed while Mr. Glass was disabled from a protracted spell of sickness. A misunderstanding arose and as the district is a large one both gentlemen are now on the Committee. In the Longview district, where there are three precincts, there are also two members.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,

L. L. GORSUCH, M. D., Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for one case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

A New Supreme Justice.

The President on Wednesday nominated Judge David J. Brewer, of Kansas, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. The appointee is 50 years old and a native of Smyrna, Asia Minor, where he was born while his father was a missionary in that country. He is at present Circuit Judge of the Kansas District. The appointment was a surprise to the country, as Judge Brewer was not an applicant.

The cotton crop is estimated at 7,124,000 bales, not counting what the inhabitants of the "Dry" states will spit.

Hamp Logg, a Graves county farmer, went home for his Thanksgiving dinner and found that triplets had been added to his family.

PECULIAR EPITAPHS.

Curious Head-Stones in the Catholic Cemetery at Pittsfield, Mass.

It is well worth a trip to this town to spend a half day in its Catholic cemetery. Here may be seen, perhaps, the largest collection of head-stones in the country. They are the life-work of a rosy-faced, untutored Irishman, who was not only versed in the "three R's," but was also gifted with a vein of doggerel and a genius for carving that had both been cultured, might have made him a sculptor-poet.

A generation ago people in search of lapidary services were attracted to his shop by the sign:

Sculptured marble here you find,
To suit the fancy of the most refined.

Very probably the sympathetic proprietor after questioning the mourner on the circumstances attending the death of the deceased, promised not only to carve but to illustrate a fitting epitaph. What must have been the delight and surprise of one set of bereaved ones, as they beheld the image of the dear departed, dressed in a large hammer coat, with buttons as claws as his head, and even the seams down the back, holding a pole so that the line fell from it at an angle of ten degrees, and uttering the following pathetic words:

"I died a falling, as this picture shows,
And left this world, with all its woes,
To another realm I took my flight,
In '97 with angels singing sweet.

The action of a former parish priest, in causing a woman who died while drunk to be buried in unconsecrated ground, inspired the following indignant words:

"I fought with God, the 'rogue with man,
Left in a lone corner here I am;
I leave all to God, to Him alone I pray,
That among his lambs I'll be to day.

Here is a sweeter strain:

Erected by her father McCarthy,
She left me her father and mother to me,
Forever the loss of our daughter's soul.

These lines have certainly one element of sublimity, namely, obscurity:

Hosanna Lord to the eternal praise,
That father and mother be happy both this day.

Mullaney puts the following disputatious words into the mouth of "Amos Dorman, of Otice":

Altho' a Yankee, have I not full right
In my own way to seek my God through Christ?
Let not my friends speak the way;
I found in shelter of the Church of Rome.

In the lines below he records a most extraordinary case:

Here lies two sisters, both virtuous, fair and young,
Who died, generally regretted, in child-birth of a son;

Their father crossed the ocean,
When their little ones were the way;
I hope their souls are happy;
Good Christians, for them pray.

What a delicate tribute the poet, in these lines, imagines a husband paying to his wife:

Here lies Mag. no brag, both fair and young,
And also Ann, our dear and only child;
If God considered our love and unity,
Some hundred years he'd leave them yet to me.

And how touching is this epitaph:

She ordered to be buried next to Mrs. Mackey:
But the verbal displays on these stones can not "hold a candle" to the designs upon them. Under "Amos" Dorman's inscription a horrible caricature of a Bishop, long-waisted, bald-headed and coarse-featured, is baptizing a kneeling man, who, were he to rise, would bear the same proportion to the divine that the ordinary-sized man bears to a dwarf. The convert's hat, lying on the ground, must have fitted over his shoulders. In another place a man, perhaps the deceased, is present in nineteenth century clothes among the toga-tufted apostles, at the crucifixion. The angels on all these stones are—we can not say personifications of awkwardness—but they are the spirits of it; and all the wall-eyed little girls that accompany their weeping elders to a conventional monument wear pantaloons. On one stone may be seen this simple design, angels, cross, harp of Erin and lamb. Every lamb on these old stones has a body the size of a pig's and a head about the size of a cat's. But the masterpiece—the work in which the sculptor reached the apex of his genius, is "The Last Supper." This bizarre description, I hope it is not wrong to say that the apostles look like gnomes, and that there are feet enough for only nine of them.—Pittsfield (Mass.) Cor. Boston Herald.

The New York State Board of Health, in a bulletin recently issued in regard to the prevention of diphtheria, relies mainly on sulphur fumigation.
